

Ezra Brooks 7 Year

For 7 Generations

This Ezra Brooks has been aged for 7 years, which is around the average age for American whiskeys. This refers to the age of the youngest component of the spirit, so there may be a part of the blend that is much older. American whiskeys have seen a significant growth in popularity in recent years. In accordance with U.S. law they must be aged in new oak barrels. Bourbon is the most well-known type of whiskey made in America and is becoming increasingly popular with whiskey drinkers around the world. It is made from a grain mixture that is more than half corn, rye, wheat, malted barley or malted rye grain. Most bourbon is made in Kentucky.

Color: Old Ezra 7 Year Old has a very rich, reddish brown color that makes it easy to believe it is at least seven years of age. A very warm looking whiskey, no hints of lightness or wateriness.

Nose: Starting with a nutty scent like hazelnuts and finishing with vanilla and banana notes.

Flavor: 7 Year Old Ezra is nice and smooth. It has a nice oaky warmth and all the nutty flavors.

Finish: The finish is long and peppery. The 101 proof gives a nice warming sensation without any harsh burn.

Perfect Serve:

A nice sippin' whiskey for when you need a serious spirit.
