

Jefferson's Groth Reserve Cask

Ridiculously Small Batch Bourbon

The new Jefferson's Reserve Groth Reserve Cask Finish has first been aged in new American oak for six years. From there it was finished in Groth Cabernet Sauvignon barrels for a further nine months. Groth is a well respected winery out of California's Napa Valley, and its cab in particular is considered an wine in its grape varietal category, which is thus likely why those behind Jefferson's turned to them to get hold of the wine casks for this special release.

The whiskey has a starbright aroma of peaches, blackberries, caramel corn and toffee, which leads to a palate marked by burnt oak, red wine, cinnamon spice and dark and dried fruits. The finish is long and dry, with lasting notes of sweet tobacco, cornbread and baked apples.
