

Knappogue Castle 14 YO

Rare Collection of Irish Single Malts

Knappogue Castle Irish Whiskey named after a beautiful 15th century castle built in 1497 by Sean MacNamara. In 1920's, the castle was purchased and restored by Mark Edwin Andrews. In the 1960s, Andrews began buying casks of fine pot still whiskey from the top distilleries in Ireland. He aged and bottled them under the Knappogue Castle label. His last batch of Knappogue 1951 is revered by connoisseurs as the oldest and rarest Irish whiskey. Knappogue 14YO is superb single malt made exclusively from malted barley. Triple distilled one batch at a time in traditional onion shape copper pot stills. Marriage of 14YO single malts, 80% aged in bourbon casks and 20% in Oloroso Sherry casks. No coloring is added.

Nose: The typical orchard fruits/apple pie character of the malt is given depth with the use of Oloroso Sherry casks, in the form of fleshy fruit – plums and apricots. The bourbon cask influence appears as a sweet vanilla note which is in harmony with the biscuit-like aroma of the barley.

Palate: The nose sets up the expectation of a real mouthful of flavour, and it follows through. The body is rich and fruity; with hints of green apple with the zest of grapefruit. The malt helps to bring out the quality of the wood: sweet vanilla with light tannins from the charred oak. Finish is medium in length, going from full fruity notes to dry yet pleasant barley conclusion.

Perfect Serve:

Neat, on the rocks or in a mixed cocktail.
